

THE CORONERS' OFFICE AGAIN.

Body Kept Nearly Three Days
Awaiting Burial Permit.

"There Must Have Been a Mis-understanding," Says the Clerk.

The Coroners' office is meeting with no little embarrassment in explaining how it happened that the body of little four-months-old James Malloy, who died Friday morning, was obliged to wait for burial until yesterday afternoon, for want of a permit of removal.

There was negligence somewhere, but there is so much looseness and want of system in the management of the Coroners' office that it is very difficult to place the responsibility.

The first notification of the death of the baby was sent to the Coroners' office by the Morrisania police at 11 o'clock Friday morning. It was agreed that the child should be buried by his mother, Kate Malloy, early that morning. As the father, Benjamin Malloy, had been out of employment for some time he could not afford to bury the child, and he so told the police. The parents live on the second floor of an old frame house at 161 East One Hundred and Sixty-third street. They have three other children.

At the same time, the notice of the death reached the Coroner's office, and the police summoned the dead wagon from the Morgue. When it arrived the case belonged to Coroner Schulte, and it was in the duty of the Coroner to see that the body could not be removed because the Coroner's permit was not yet issued.

It is said by the parents of the child that he did not call at the house until Saturday afternoon, when he did not leave for removal.

Yesterday afternoon the Morrisania police sent another urgent message to the Coroner, who responded, and it went back again to the Morgue.

"The case of James Malloy, reported on the 13th inst., needs immediate attention, as suspicious circumstances have arisen."

The result was that the child's body was finally removed from the house about 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, after being laid out in the same room occupied by the family for nearly three days. It was said that it was already in a state of decomposition.

Dr. Conway, coroner, could not be found either at his office or his house this morning, and it was Coroner Schulte's day off, so that no explanation was forthcoming from either of them.

Chief Clerk Reynolds tried to explain matters to an inquirer, who may have been some misunderstanding between Dr. Conway and the officers in charge of the Morgue, though why it should have been necessary to remove the body in an urgent case that should have been attended to on Friday last he could not understand.

"I am Dr. Conway and asked him about the case last night," said the Chief Clerk. "Some reporters were present. Dr. Conway, who had visited the home of the Malloys on Friday afternoon, and had given orders for the body to be removed at once to the Morgue."

"He said he had not even been certain because there was some suspicion to as to the cause of the child's death. The mother had informed him that her husband had struck her the night before while she had the baby in her arms. He was drunk at the time, according to his story, and the department of justice should investigate, as it might be found that the baby's death was caused by a blow from the father. No signs of a bruise or wound were found, however, were found on the body."

This does not tally with the story told by the police, who said that two reporters of the Coroners' office visited the Malloys' house until Saturday evening. It is an out-of-the-way corner of the city, and the man who made the trip up there is no doubt very much more like worn than average Coroners' office fancy.

BEAT HIS BLIND WIFE.

Aged Bernard McCarron Held to Await Result of Her Injuries.

Bernard McCarron, a gas-house keeper, states seven years old of 114 East Fourteenth street, was held in the Essex Market Police Court to await trial on charges of wife-beating. He was drunk last night and brutally beat his wife, Margaret, who is sixty-five years old, and totally blind.

Her cries for help were heard by other tenants in the building, who rushed to her aid. McCarron stood by his wife and defended her unmercifully against the accusers.

McCarron, 40, a small and spruce looking man, was born in New York. Previous stations Mrs. McCarron was found to be in a critical condition, and was taken to Bellevue Hospital.

MADE A DASH FOR LIBERTY.

Gus Johnson's Bold Attempt to Escape Imprisonment.

Shot At Four Times by Policeman Muller.

Gus Johnson, thirty years old, of 29 Broome street, made a daring attempt to escape from a policeman at 6:30 o'clock this morning.

It took four shots from the policeman's revolver to bring him to bay. Johnson was, however, discharged from custody by Justice Martin, in the Tombs Court, this morning, through ignorance of the facts.

Johnson was arrested last night for intoxication at Grand and Elizabeth streets by Policeman Curtis, of the Tenth Precinct. This morning the prisoner was turned over to Policeman Charles W. Muller to be taken to court.

As the pair reached the corner of Franklin and Centre streets Johnson suddenly broke away and started on a run towards Baxter street. Muller drew his revolver, and after calling upon the fleeing man to halt, opened fire.

Four bullets whizzed past Johnson's head before he finally came to a halt in Baxter street, near Bayard.

Muller led his prisoner back to the Tombs, where Johnson was arraigned before Justice Martin.

Nothing was said about the man's attempt to escape, and Justice Martin allowed him to go after warning him not to get drunk any more.

Capt. Creeden was surprised to learn that the story of Johnson's attempted escape, as reported by Policeman Muller, when he returned to the station-house.

Capt. Creeden was surprised to learn that the man had been discharged, but did not question Justice Martin's action.

He supposed, of course, that Muller had informed Justice Martin of all the facts.

Muller set to work to investigate the matter.

Justice Martin was much surprised when told by a reporter about Johnson's break for liberty.

"Johnson pleaded so hard," said Justice Martin to-day, "that I let him off. I shall investigate this thing thoroughly and see who is to blame."

MARRIED IN PRISON.

Brds and Groos Sent Up for Robbing an Old Pensioner.

Chief Clerk, thirty-two years old, was sentenced to two years in State prison by Judge Fitzgerald, in Part II. of the General Sessions, this morning. Eugene Clifford, twenty-one years old, who was jointly convicted with him last week of robbery, was given two years in the penitentiary.

"Johnson pleaded so hard," said Justice Martin to-day, "that I let him off. I shall investigate this thing thoroughly and see who is to blame."

The Chief Clerk, who appears to be innocent, has been granted a reprieve.
